The Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would have them do to you," feels oversimplified and naive after a summer of surprising violence, with battles of ideas and bodies growing each day. This piece of popular wisdom fails to suggest how to care for others or build communities that look out for all of their citizens. Join us for a conversation guided by Jewish wisdom that provides some guidelines for building more just and equitable communities for all.

Rabbi Adam M. Allenberg is the Assistant Director of Recruitment and Admission for the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion. Before returning to Los Angeles, Adam served as the Director of Congregational Learning at Temple Emanu-El and the Program Director at Congregation Beth Am in Palo Alto, California.

Lunch reservations required by FRIDAY, OCTOBER 16.
Please email jewishstudies@rice.edu with your name and “Allenberg” in the subject line; specify any dietary restrictions in the email.